Coarsening: the pattern grows without changing its shape

a random mixture of two phases separates, then the domains merge: the structure factor keeps its shape and moves as a whole — self-similarity in time, the same collapse as in the finite-size scaling of the critical notes.