

chaotic advection: two point vortices blinking in turn.
The fluid folds, stretches and stirs itself — the same motion that marbles chocolate and rips apart plankton blooms.